LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION

To Whom It May Concern,

It is my pleasure to recommend Avirineni Jaidev Chowdary, founder and lead instructor of the AI Literacy & Quantitative Thinking Initiative for Rural Students. This voluntary initiative was carried out in collaboration with HEAL (Health and Education for All) Charity, a nonprofit organization based in Thotapalli, Andhra Pradesh. HEAL was established in the UK in 1992, to help disadvantaged populations in India escape the poverty trap. As an international charity, we are registered in the UK, USA, India, Australia, and Canada run entirely by volunteers. Our goal is dedicated to supporting disadvantaged children by providing free education, shelter, healthcare, and holistic development opportunities. Within this community service setting, Jaidev's contribution stood out as both impactful and inspiring.

Over 16 months from April 2025 every single weekend, Jaidev generously devoted his time and expertise to designing and teaching a curriculum that introduced more than 40 rural high school students to essential quantitative concepts, including percentages, simple and compound interest and graphical data analysis in addition to Computer Skills and Data Model Making on various softwares. His ability to translate complex mathematical ideas into clear, practical lessons ensured that students from underserved communities could readily understand and apply them in real life.

The program emphasized applied reasoning through hands-on exercises and mini-projects. Students modelled savings growth, compared financial scenarios, and presented their findings, developing genuine analytical skills beyond rote memorization. Jaidev also implemented pre- and post-program assessments, which showed significant improvement in students' grasp of financial concepts and data interpretation, evidence of both thoughtful curriculum design and effective instruction. His teaching also sparked discussions about how AI and data can solve real-world problems.

Equally notable was Jaidev's initiative and leadership in the spirit of community service. Identifying a gap in rural education, he voluntarily built the program from the ground up, mentoring students and guiding them through project presentations. His intellectual curiosity and commitment to accessibility reflect a rare combination of analytical rigor and social responsibility.

I am confident Jaidev will bring the same vision, creativity, and dedication to future academic and professional endeavours. His voluntary service with HEAL Charity demonstrates not only technical ability but also a deep commitment to empowering communities through education. He has my strongest recommendation for opportunities that value intellectual initiative, quantitative curiosity, and leadership in service.

Please feel free to contact me if further information is required.

Sincerely,

M. Kavitha
